The system of detective and spice which may seem necessary in times of civil war and sedition, la liable to the grociest ibuses, if the whole system is not itself an busc. We are reminded of the maxim "set a regue to catch a regue." Some, no doubt, eauege in these employments from apright moives, sa a part of official duties; but the kind re of a different class. They recort to expelients little better than the crimes they are mployed to reveal. Such a system of espionage is nothing new. It is a stending instinct time tion in tyranulcal and oppressive governments, to by the authorities.

agitators rejeteed in what they took to be tribunal. progress, and indulged in happy anticipations of a political millennium when all men would air to impose restmints on the natural rights of man and women. Societies were formed, and lectures delivered, and action upon these ntorian notions was hinted at pretty plainly. The ruling powers began to be starmed, and set themselves to work to ferret out the secrets of the movement. The Historian Bisect says, ministers, "to dicever the trick, adopted he policy which is necessary in apprehended lots, and employed despicable instruments, that are easily to be found in all great cities, as spice, that were to attend the conventicles of sedition, and to become members of the ocicties, in order to betray the secrets with

These secret spies, "despicable instru nents," sent to flad witches, coon found them, and a number were arrested, among it others the celebrated Horns Tooks. The bletorion observes that the evidence against them was given by two classes of men; one class of unquestionable verseity, the other "bired soles, of course, deserving no credit on their own account, but balieved or not according to the congruity of their testimony with other circumstances." These last were garrulous in their testimony; but an English jury would not consider PITTSBURG COAL say of these discussions and propositions, never soled on as treason, and so sequitted be secured.

The counsel for the crown tried to make nt a case of tresson, and even Pitt held it to e such, but English judges would not admit England had committed too many judicial murdera lu such cases.

The historian of that period observes No doctrine can be more inconsistent with the security of a free country than construc-tive treasor, and none he the discriminating justice of English law more severely reprocated. Coust uctive tresson, indeed, is an ergine of tyrspny, under whatever form it has rea estab lated. Instances have occurred in much more benigmant reigns of men suffering from **r*st/d late spretations when obnexious to the ruling party. But noder the equitable and eolightered principles and centiments of the present age, whoever might be the accusers.

So the English judges and juries treated the charge of treason made out of political discussion and proposed political action. So they tr.aicd the evidence of blied spice and informers. A few years since a French lealer bought them of a Romen Prince, bu he wee, for some reason not explained, com pelled to sell them to the government at a nominal price. Three of the carriages are unique in design and execution. The back seats, intended for servants, rest on wood carvings of exquisite beauty, gilded with ax treme dellescy. The pelutiums on the door paucis are perfect gems of art. The largest carriage of the three was evidently intended for state corasions, and resembles in shape and decoration those to be seen at I rianon. It was built at Bologua for a cardinal of the Bor ghose family, and was esod, it is said, by Pins IX on the oceas on of the return from Gaets.

The trial of the great twenty-tuch Rod min gua came off the resuccessivily. As the event was noticed to occur in the Herali it was widely known, and cora quently there were present at the trial a large number of citiesname well as military and naval officers. An excursion eteamer, with a good band on board, came down the bay and remained off the fort at the bradef the wherf during the time the "test" was being made. The brad played patriotic music and the steamer diablyed the national colors, and all the circumstances, including the serone low lineas of the day, made up a lively as well as interesting occasion.

NEW PORK, Oct. 31. The World's srmy special says of recent perations: Considering the extent of the novements and the number of men engaged, movements and the number of men engaged, there was very little fighting. No cannon was need by either side. At the time of the formation of our lies of battels, when wa placed several batteries in position for the purpose of shelling the woods which still branch tervened between our forces and the enemy's works. The reason that none were used prevailed by the position of a detachment of Col. Powell's consisting of a detachment of Col. Powell's cavalry, found a considerable body of discavalry, found a considerable body of discavalry. works. The reason that rome were used pre-viously was that the woods were so extensive and dense as to render it almost impossible. After our batteries opened the rebels were not long in replying, but poured in grape, canister and shell quite freely slong nearly the whole

There was also some fighting as the former ntered the woods which apparated the op-osleg semies, but only maintained our line, he losses cun not be very heavy on either ide. The result of the movement has been olde. The result of the movement has been to drive the rebels three miles, the larger portion of which is thickly wooded, into their ordifications along our front, almost, if not uite as strong as those in front of Peters-

The Herald's special with the cavelry says the cavelry moved towards the Southside rail road to the left of the army, little past day-light on the 25th. Encountered four brigades of the enemy's cavalry under Wade Hampton. The brigades were commanded by Generale Berringer, Young, Lee and Butler. The first serious resistance made to our advance was at Small creek, vicinity of the military telegraph road. The enemy had a strong line of breestworks covering the bridge. The first Maine regiment, armed with sixteen shooting rifes, had the advance and carried the line by as-sunt. After holding the position until iste in the day the cavalry fell back by orders to their original position.

There should be similar care exercised in the fall, or the yield of milk will fall off. Cows or sheep that are in good flesh, not to say fat, at the beginning of the cold weather are half wintered. Just now it is that feed tells best. The fresh bracing air gives an appetite; the annoyance of heat and flies does not wear off the flesh; animals can feed all day and sleep all night, and the weather is not cold enough to make it necessary to consume much of the food or of the fat, to keep up the animal heat.

GATHERING AND KEEPING FRUIT .- It is becoming a well understood principle that pears are improved by being gathered before fully ripe. Some should approach near-er maturity than others. But early apples should be fully ripe, as a general rule, be-fore gathering. Late fall and early winter apples should not be catable when picked, and all the late winter varieties should be gathered when too hard to yield the pressure of the thumb, and always before heavy fall frosts. A dry time should be sciected, if possible.

Apples should be kept cool, barely so as not to freeze. A minimum temperature of thirty-four degrees is probably about right, with as little fluctuation as possible.

The ripening process once commenced, goes on, no matter how cold, if frost is not present, slowly, perhaps, but uninterrupted-ly, until full maturity. Hence the importance of a cool cellar, which should always be dry and dark. It should be frequently aired, when the oniside temperature will hospital. suppose they'll bury him toallow it .-- [Trans Indians Hort. Society.

"Ay, but if he gets the habit!" "Ob, it break their legs. A handy farmer can profitably attend to such jobs on rainy days, with small expense except boards and think what it may come to. Remember Jem Radford's thorn."

Alas! for want of laying the warning to of long trial, that a mixture of equal parts of bariey and corn meal was greatly superior to either alone; and that 45 lbs. of corn this used were more than equal to 60 lbs. of corn used alone. It may not be necessary to mix them in equal proportions, and if, as is now the case, barley should be somewhat higher priced, doubtless one-third would answer an excellent purpose. The subject is commended to the careful attention of farmers, now in the midst of the
